As climate change accelerates, some impacts exceed the limits of mitigation and adaptation, leading to residual economic and non-economic losses and damages that affect people, economies, and ecosystems.

This online event will explore the concept of Loss and Damage, unpacking its scientific, policy, and practical dimensions, and discuss its growing relevance for Europe. It will highlight how European regions and stakeholders can better anticipate and address climate-related losses and damages.

Through presentations and discussion, the event aims to foster a shared understanding of Loss and Damage among policymakers, practitioners, and researchers, while showcasing actionable approaches to reduce vulnerability and strengthen resilience to residual climate impacts.
